Ethical governance and transparency

Indian Institute of Management Jammu had observed Vigilance Awareness Week from 30 October to 5th November 2023 on the topic ethical Governance and transparency. It is really a good initiative by the IIMJ .Ethical governance as the topic suggests means a sense of full responsibility towards the smaller cause of self and the bigger cause of the nation .Ethical governance even supersedes transparency as there is no need for the institutions like CBI, ED, CB or Hon'ble Courts to ensure transparency. The theme was " say no to corruption; commit to the nation . Really, it is a good and relevant initiative by the IIMJ to at least spread awareness about ethical Governance and make people aware about their role in the society towards nation building. Corruption is termite that is not visible from outside but not only weakening the structure but also damaging the morality thus loosing the faith of the citizens towards government and it is witnessed that in most of the cases billionaires are leaving the country with the hope to have a corruption free society. Corruption is at different levels from private entities to the government to seek favours, from institutions to institutions and from individuals to individuals but the most dangerous is due to ignorance as in some cases we are not aware about our rights and use shortcut methods to get the work done but others being aware about subject do not fall prey to such deceits .This is the only reason for me to appreciate the awareness campaign being observed by the IIMJ. Let's hope that in near future more such events will be taken up by involving the participation of more and more concerns as many organisations are working in the same field with same motive to eradicate the virus of corruption from the society. It is not the responsibility of few institutions or investigating agencies or the government or the Hon'ble Courts but let the people take a pledge not to bribe anyone and if reported anywhere it should be brought to the notice of the relevant agencies. To curb the menace of corruption from the society let's us first remove it from our mindset and become part of the campaign and spread mouth to mouth awareness amongst fellow citizens.
